ALUP

Kompressoren

ALUP's heritage

Founded in Germany in 1923, the company derives its name of the automotive products that were manufactured in the Köngen' mechanical workshop where ALUP came into existence: Auto-LUft-Pumpen. Only two years later, the first range of piston compressors was being developed, whilst in 1980 rotary screw compressors were added to the product offer.

Over time, experience grew and innovation prospered, leading to today's high quality product portfolio. As such, the name ALUP Kompressoren has become synonymous with innovative technology blended with a strong sense of tradition.

Today, ALUP Kompressoren is still operating out of its home town Köngen, where everything started in 1923.

The use of low performance lubricants will irreversibly damage your equipment and lead to high maintenance and repair cost.

The use of ALUP engineered lubricants will help you to reduce the risk of:

- compression element failure
- wear of components, increased friction, cavitations
- reduced cooling, overheating bearings, compression elements, components
- reduced critical clearance
- corrosion
- wrong pH damage of parts, seals and internals
- varnish layer on internal parts (coolers, piping,...)
- low performance, higher energy consumption
- deposits
- high unpredictable maintenance cost
- clogging of oil filter, separator and down stream air filters
- limited operation range.

In compressors, oil & air are in close contact. A mist of lubricant is repeatedly exposed to large volumes of hot air, ideal oxidising conditions.

Oil Oxidation

Causes

- High operating temperature
- High deposit formation
- No additives to disperse or deterge oxidation products and soluble organic acids

Reduced oil lifetime

Effect (sludge)

- Deposit formation
- Oil thickening
- Lacquering
- Colour changes

Anti-oxidant additives delay the oxidising process, deposit and acid formation to extend oil lifetime and protect equipment during stand-still period.

Oil change is due
